Portfolio performance review

The 4D Global Infrastructure Fund (Unhedged) was up net 1.76% net (AUD) in March, outperforming the benchmark's return of 0.43% (by 1.34%) but under-performing the FTSE 50/50 Infrastructure Index which was up 3.21% (AUD). Currency detracted 26bps from performance in March.

The strongest performer for March was US integrated regulated utility Nextera Energy, up 15.8%. This follows an announcement by the Federal Election Commission that it would close the case against NEE regarding alleged campaign finance violations, without finding evidence of a violation. This removes a significant overhang on the stock.

The weakest performer in March was Chinese toll road operator Yuexiu Transport, down 13.9% following a disappointing dividend announcement as part of their FY results presentation.

Markets remain volatile on the outlook for inflation, interest rates and economic growth. Most developed market Central Banks are at peak policy rates, with market expectations of rate cuts in 2024 being pared back from the aggressive levels seen at the start of the year. The pace of disinflation has slowed, but the delayed impact of high interest rates on economic growth may yet to fully be seen. There remains a fine balancing act between holding rates in restrictive territory too long and hitting activity – and loosening too quickly before inflation is sustainably within target ranges. Listed infrastructure, as an asset class, fundamentally can do well in either scenario - with explicit or implicit inflation hedges and long-term predictable earnings profiles underpinned by contract or regulation.

Month in review

Global equity markets were up for the fifth month in a row in March, with MSCI (Local) gaining 3.36% and 10.06% for Q1. Central bank updates were a key focus in March.

March economic data reinforced the “soft landing” thematic in the US, with further evidence of economic resilience but a slowing path of disinflation. Core US CPI was persistent and rose by 0.4% Month on Month in February. Headline CPI rose on the back of the continued rise in housing and rebound in energy prices. Broad based price increases, especially across services, impacted core inflation. February monthly retail sales were weaker, with the control group flat vs 0.4% expected. Amongst major economies, US growth continued to be upgraded over Q1.

The Fed Chair, Jerome Powell, downplayed the higher-than-expected inflation prints the last two months and reinforced a dovish tone. In its quarterly economic projections, the Fed maintained its median of 3 cuts this year, whilst revising up core inflation 20bps to end 2024 at 2.6% and 2025 flat at 2.2%. The Fed also upgraded its outlook for economic growth. Market pricing for 2024 cuts is now in line with the Fed, at 75bps, halving from 150bps at the start of the year.

The Bank of England also signalled a dovish stance, with two remaining hawkish members (of nine members) turning neutral and no longer pushing for a hike. CPI continues to fall, hitting 3.4% YoY in February after being 3.9%-4% for the prior three months. In Europe, manufacturing, economic sentiment, and tepid consumption continue as headwinds. The ECB continues to signal rate cuts by the middle of the year to encourage growth.

The Bank of Japan increased its interest rates for the first time in 17 years, normalising monetary policy and being the final major economy to abandon negative interest rate policy, as well as its yield curve control and ETF purchase operations policy. This coincided with the Nikkei 225 index marking a record high, 34 years after its 1989 bubble burst.

In China, at the National People's Congress, the 5% growth target for 2024 was renewed, as well as a budget deficit target of 3% (lower than the 3.8% in 2023). Some investors expected additional stimulus to be announced, on top of the multi-year central government bond issuance plan and special local government bond issuance plans.

Underlying Chinese data seems to be showing further signs of stabilisation. China's exports and imports started the year on a positive note, both extended the recovery seen in late 2023. The monthly activity data showed retail sales in line, and industrial production the fastest in two years, whilst property investments slowed more than expected.

Elsewhere in Emerging Markets, Brazil and Chile continued their easing cycle, whilst Mexico implemented its first rate cut this cycle.
