4D Global Infrastructure Fund Monthly performance update As at 31 December 2020

Portfolio performance review

The 4D Global Infrastructure Fund was down a net 0.75% (AUD) in December 2020, under-performing the benchmark's return of 0.47% (by 1.22%) but out-performing the FTSE 50/50 Infrastructure Index, which was down 3.2% (AUD). The currency impact was significant detracting 3.06% from otherwise positive performance.

The strongest performer for December was pure play renewable operator EDP Renovaveis up 28.4% on the back of increased global stimulus focusing on the green energy transition.

The weakest performer in December was Canadian midstream operator Pembina Pipeline down 8.5% as the midstream sector remains out of favour as the global focus turns green.

We continue to position for the prevailing economic outlook and infrastructure as a means of a recovery as we continue to capitalize on the raft of opportunities currently on offer.

Year in review

To state the obvious: 2020 was a year like no other! The COVID pandemic presented challenges the likes of which individuals, corporates and governments have never experienced before. The impact of this was to push the global economy into recession, force lockdowns and create social dislocation on a previously unimaginable scale. Despite these challenges we remain optimistic about the global economic outlook, and the infrastructure asset class for 2021 and beyond.

Firstly, and in a truly magnificent endorsement of how creative mankind can be in a crisis, vaccines have been developed in record time and are now being deployed. This is truly remarkable and should hopefully see the currently rampant virus gradually tamed. As CSL CEO Paul Perreault said: 'often a crisis breeds trailblazers and ingenuity, and the acceleration of solutions to treat and prevent COVID-19 has been truly inspirational'.

Secondly, while we think the currently worsening pandemic will last longer than was initially hoped, we believe the global economy will ultimately emerge stronger for the experience. The huge amount of fiscal and monetary stimulus is still to be fully felt in economic terms with, of course, much of that spending focussed on essential infrastructure investment around the globe including the green energy transition. All this investment will be a strong positive for the global economy over coming years improving efficiency, productivity and output. Industry participants suggest that for every $1 of infrastructure investment an economy gets a boost of anywhere between $3-$5 dollars. That's a significant multiplier and demonstrates the attractiveness of infrastructure investment. In addition, many of the operational changes that have been forced on business by the pandemic will, we believe, lead to a stronger, more efficient economic environment post the virus.

Thirdly, the election of Democrat Joe Biden as US President should herald a more stable, traditional form of presidency with properly developed and articulated policy returning as the mainstay of political discussion and debate. One of the few policy areas both parties do agree on is the need for large scale US infra spend to both stimulate growth and replace an aged asset base. As the Democrats will now control US Congress the market will be eagerly watching the progress, and assessing the likely impact, of some of Mr Biden's more controversial policies (eg increased taxes).

Accordingly, as infrastructure investors we remain very excited about the listed infrastructure investment opportunity in 2021 and beyond. The combination of infrastructure's attractive fundamentals (supporting earnings resilience), the economic and geographic diversity within the sector and prevailing long-term structural thematic (eg. the emerging middle class in EM's and the green energy transition to renewables) represent a unique investment opportunity in listed infrastructure. We believe this opportunity has actually been enhanced by the current pandemic - government stimulus programs are fast-tracking infrastructure investment, stretched government balance sheets will see a greater reliance on private sector capital, and a 'lower for longer' interest rate environment is very supportive of infrastructure investment and valuations.

Simply put Infrastructure, in all its forms, will be integral to the global economic recovery and returning society to a 'new normal'. There is no global economic recovery without roads, railways, pipelines, power transmission networks, communication infrastructure, ports and airports.
